There is a profitable opportunity with Azure but it's hard to get started.

As Azure usage grows, there is an important opportunity for MSPs to differentiate their cloud businesses.

Going to market with Azure requires a serious amount of preparation. MSPs need to build a portfolio, write service descriptions, develop pricing, setup the infrastructure, and train their teams. Once in the marketplace, customers still need to be educated on the value of an Azure solution.

As a result, not every partner has been able to take advantage of Microsoft Incentives around Azure or build recurring revenue around the cloud.

When selling Azure, a lot gets lost in translation.

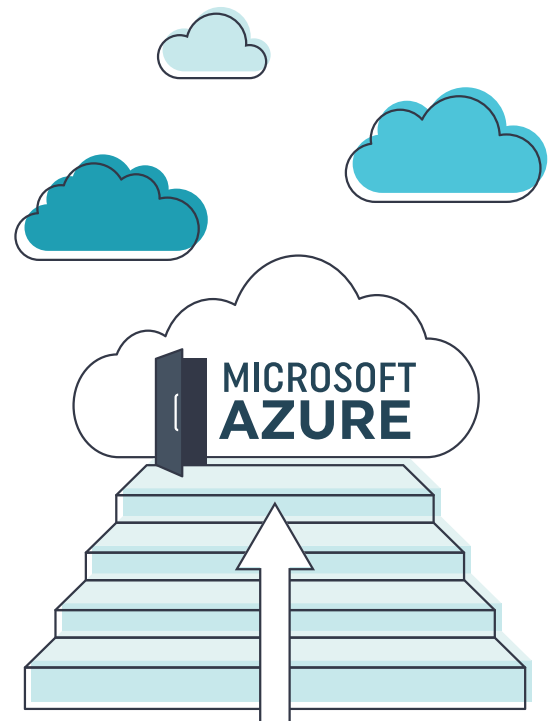

During consultations, MSPs need to offer data-driven insights and platform knowledge to help customers understand the potential value of Azure.

Not only do they need more information about Azure, they need assurance and expertise.

With guidance, customers discover they can:

- Protect their servers
- Build flexible infrastructure
- Reduce operational costs

With MSPComplete, partners can unlock assessment tools and prescriptive guidance to help their Azure business take off.
